YORKTOWN. The Centennial Celebration Very Much of a Failure Thus Far.

[Cincinnati Commercial special. General Hancock, speaking of the cen-tennial celebration, said to-day that a great many promises had been made that would be hard to fulfill. This bids fair to be a conspicuous feature of the celebration; in fact, all but the ceremonies under government auspices have already been aban ed. To attempt such a program as was laid out by the centennial commission was a chimercal scheme to begin with, because Yorktown practically stands in a desert. A great deal of money subscribed has been spent by Colonel Peyton, agent for the commission, and a barn-like building put up, the Moore house rehabilited, and other operations carried though that promised little return for the outlay. As far as the government is concerned, all is ready, and hundred acres of tents are pitched about two miles from the village.

This has been a busy day. Early in the morning the entire brigade of regulars was out pitching tents for the militia, governors' staffs and Masons, and but few more are to be put up. The regulars were dis-gusted because they had to put up tents for the militia. But the secretary of war ordered it done, and they were compelled The Maryland and New Jersey brigades arrived to-day, as well as the cadets from the Virginia Military institute. They went into camp and added to the bustle that has filled the day. Mounted orderlies, march-troops and the blare of bugles have com-bined to confuse the Sabbath most effec-

Still Yorktown is unhappy. Not a tithe of the people have come yet that she expected to entertain. Then, too, she is disgusted because the celebration is to last but week instead of a month. The greatest trouble arises from dust, which lies six inches deep in the streets and on the field where the review is to take place. It rises in white clouds at the least touch of the noof or wheel, and how soldiers are maneuver across it is a question. The dust they will raise will equal a desert sandstorm. General Hancock said to-day that he was thinking of an attempt to sprinkle it, but he still hopes for rain, and if it fails he does not know what he can do. The naval officers say that "The affair on shore will be a fizzle," but they are no doubt prejudiced.
In addition to the militia there are on the ground about 1,000 regulars, being part of the tenth infantry and companies of the first, second, third and fifth artillery. Small as this force is it is more men than have been concentrated east of the Mississippi since the war except once at Pittsburg riots. Colonel Clitz commands the brigade, and Major General Hancock commands the field. He has a capacious camp on the high bank of York river, near the Moore house, but the general, with his family and the wives of officers of his staff, live on board the magnificent sound steamer St. John's, which he brought around from Norfolk. There are nine ships of war lying abreast of the town, the Frenchmen not yet hav-ing arrived. The river is as busy as the shore with preparation. A great fleet of oyster schooners, huckster boats and tugs have come with supplies, for everything had to be brought. There was nothing but sand to begin with, on which some 200 people struggled for existence. Now there s plenty to eat and the abundance of the supply in comparison with the crowd promises to prevent extortion.

Colonel Peyton's building was utilized to-day by the Catholics, who celebrated high mass at noon. Bishop Keane, of Richmond, conducted the services. A chorus of seventy-five voices had been collected from Washington, Baltimore and Richmond, and they were supported by a grand orchestra. It was intended to be an opening of the ceremonies under the auspices of the Roman Catholic church, and was a magnificent service. The trouble was only a few hundred people were here to attend it. The Catholic societies from Richmond formed most of the congrega-

Jeffries' Purposes. The board of health met this morning to further investigate the rumors that the sanitary police had been whacking with the vault cleaners. No evidence was taken and the investigation was postponed until this evening. Officer Crouch this morning states that his evidence, as taken down Tuesday night, places him in a wrong light, and the board agreed this morning that he should be allowed to modify it. He now says that he did not proved to east reflections upon Dr. Woods. intend to cast reflections upon Dr. Wands that he did not intend to say that had said that Shelton had received money from the vault cleaners, and that to-night he would straighten out the tangle in other respects. He says that leading questions, which he did not properly consider at the moment assented to by him Friday night, and that assented to by him Friday night, and that he was not given an opportunity to read the report of his testimony, which, although he gave under oath, he did not sign. Dr. Wands appeared before the board this morning and, although not called to testify, entered an explicit and positive denial to the charges against him, as they appear in Crouch's statement. A warm interchange of words took place this warm interchange of words took place this morning between Dr. Elder, the president of the board, and Dr. Jeffries. The board last Saturday night asked the police board to withdraw Crouch's appointment. All the members of the board signed the request. Dr. Elder now says that he signed the request upon the statement of Dr. Jeffries that Crouch was taking money from the vault men. He supposed at the time that the charges made by Jeffries referred to the conduct of Crouch during the administration of the present board. Dr. Elder now finds that refers to matters which occurred before the present board was organized. Dr. Elder therefore, moved the withdrawal of the request for Crouch's removal from the force during the pending the force during the pending of the investigation. The motion was agreed to unanimously.

Dr. Jeffries stated that his motive in springing the investigation, at the present time, was for the purpose of obtaining evidence to be used against ex-officer Watson, who has brought suit against Jeffries in the criminal court for slander. Dr. Elder holds that Dr. Jeffries has compromised both Elder and Elstun before the public in not informing them of the evidence Jeffries claims to have had against Crouch months ago. Dr. Jeffries maintains that such was not his intention. It appears to be plain that, so far as the investigation has progressed, the evidence relates to something that was investigated by council three years ago, the result of that nvestigation being the exoneration of Wands, who then swore that he had no interest in any machine, and

Cabinet Making.

Cincinnati Commercial special. In regard to cabinet matters it is a subect of remark here that Arthur keeps well him profess to know nothing. It is even said that he has not made up his own mind, and is greatly worried over the complications which may arise. Geographically considered the clamor from Indiana for recognition is the greatest. It is is gravely stated that if an Indiana man is not put in, the administration will be a failure. This is backed up by the old argument that Indiana saved the republican party last fall, and had no recognition except a few subordinate places and clerkships.

THE DAILY NEWS.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1881,

THE pope assumes that he still considers himself a prisoner. That is enduring a good deal for a metaphor.

SENATOR MAHONE was arrested at Petersburg, Saturday night, on a charge that he was about to fight a duel with Jubal Early. He says there is no truth in RIDDLEBERGER and Congressman Wise met "on the field of honah," exchanged three shots, and embraced in melo-dramatic reconciliation. It is astonishing what a peace-maker pistol practice is.

MAHONE says /"Gorham or gore." He will have no other secretary. It would be a happy thing if the republicans could leave them both in "one red burial blent." They ought to consult David Davis about this.

FRANK HATTON, of the Burlington Hawkeye, will succeed A. P. M. G. Tyner, it is said again, President Arthur, according to the latest rumor, demanding Tyner's resignation. If this be true, it can be no longer said that Mr. Arthur has not recognized Indiana.

THE rumor is raised that Conkling is to go into President Arthur's cabinet. We trust it is not true. President Arthur would certainly wreck himself and his administration by that act. Why, any one in his peculiar position, blessed with fine abilities his admirers say, and possessed of the quality which makes friendships and softens asperities, with greatness thrust upon him and the one chance of his life in his hand, should throw it away to gratify a selfish love or fulfil a quixotic idea is more than any one in his sober senses can account for. We hope it will not have to be accounted for.

SARAH BERNHARDT, after her return, to France, said of Washington, that it was a dark, gloomy place wide streets, and cheerless in its life, or words to that effect. The French Yorktown visitors will come to much the same conclusion. The oriole pageant at Baltimore was rather small potatoes, and the alleged reception at Washington confined to some dreary hand shaking, and a dinner at Secretary Blaine's. The Frenchmen will think we "Have no delight to pass away the time, Unless to see our shadow in the sun And descant on our own deformity." Take them to a base ball match so as they may see that we have our elegant amusements as well as the nations of

Now, just as there were some deluded eople who believed that President Garpeople who believed that President Gar-field was constantly getting well when he was slowly dying, so there are others who believe that President Arthur will turn a political somersault, cut loose from his trusted intimates and adopt the friends and the policy of the man whose bitter political enemy he was. Such persons will be doomed to disappointment. Arthur is a "stalwart;" his friends are "stalwarts," and his will be a "stalwart" administration. General Grant can, I believe, have anything he wants; so can Conkling; so can Arthur. Garfield is dead.—[Washington etter, New York Post. The New York Sun says the stalwarts in that state will certainly not support the half-breed ticket with the zeal which carried the state last year for Garfield and Arthur. A few days ago when the halfbreeds carried the convention and the state committee the Sun reminded them that in the history of the party whenever the stalwarts run things the party succeeded, and whenever the half-breeds were in control the party was defeated. The Sun's latest statement explains it: The half-breeds do their best right along; the stalwarts unless they can rule, ruin.

WICKED Bill Chandler bobs up serenely to say that every member of Arthur's cabinet will be a practical politican, and that of Garfield's cabinet-Hunt, Lincoln, James and MacVeagh-were "absolutely of no value in politics," "Bill," himself, we believe rejoices in being known as a "practical politician." and ought to know what he is talking about; but there is an impression that "Bill" wanted to be solicitor general of the treasury department and that "vague theorist," MacVeagh, "sat down on him" in a way he despised. This may not have been "practical politics," but it was something which was very handy to have around at that time, and it got in its work. This same MacVeagh and James, who have "absolutely no value in politics" are the two of the cabinet whom the people regard as the chief instruments in ferreting out the thievery of the Star route rascals and saving millions of dollars to the government. They who have "absolutely no value in polities" seem to have great value in the pure and economical administration of affairs. There is a spirit growing that more of those who have "absolutely no value in politics" should be called to aid in governmental administration, about which there has been too much politics and not enough "business." The fellows whom James and McaVeagh have started on the road to the penitentiary if justice gets her dues, were "practical politicians." Of the two, we believe the people would prefer the James-MacVeagh style.

THE Times last week said: It has leaked out that some of the councilors and aldermen who anticipate being tion, are proposing to cast their votes and influence their colleagues in the coming election of city officials so as to gain a point for their individual advancement. The special anxiety of these gentlemen is to gain complete control of the police force, in order that it may be used as a political machine to assist in setting up the tions from the southern democratic wards n their favor There are two points here: One the candidacy of members of the city government, the other the iniquitous use of the police force in democratic wards to form the decision of a republican convention. The first of these is forbidden by a law passed by the last legislature, approved April 14, 1881, and with an emergency clause which made it operative from and after that date. That law says: " * No member of the common council or board of aldermen hereafter to be elected shall, during the time for which he is elected, be eligible to any other city, county or township office." As the incumbents with the exception of the aldermen holding over were elected since this went into effect, they are squarely forbidden to indulge in that which the Times says they are indulging in. The purpose of the law plainly is that a position involving the city's interests shall not be used to further the personal ambitions of him who for the time occupies it. The second point-using the the police to control democratic wards to shape a republican convention can be heavily "stepped on" by a remodeling of the unfair method of choosing delegates and basing such choice upon the actual republican voters pro rata.

Yorktown. Two peoples clasp hands now in commemoration of the event which a hundred years ago they consummated with their blood. A hundred years ago Yorktown saw that victory so portentous for the world's future. Strictly speaking, it may not have achieved American independence; but at least, it was the sign which the world awaited that that independence had been achieved, and as such, set the seal of success upon it. It was on September 30 that the seige actually began, the lines of the allied armies with each a wing resting on York river, closing entirely around the town on that day, thus, O. The French troops occupied the left, the American the right while the French fleet, under De Grasse, lay below at Lynn Haven bay to head off any naval force which might come to Cornwallis's aid. On October 6 the first parallel was begun within 600 yards of the British works. On October 9 the American artillery opened fire. On October 10 the French followed, and on the evening of that day with their hot shot burned the British sloop Charon and three transports, and drove away the sloop Gaudaloupe, which were lying in the river off the town. Under the furious French and American cannonade the British guns were soon silenced. On October 11, the second parallel under the immediate direction of the German Baron Steuben, was begun within 300 yards of the British works. On October 14, two British redoubts which had kept up a galling fire on the beseigers, were marked for assault, and the Frenchmen and Americans stripped for rivalry in the fight. The American light infantry, under command of Lafavette, were in charge of one redoubt, while the reduction of the other was committed to a detachment of French grenadiers and chasseurs commanded by Major General the Baron De Viomenil. Colonel Alexander Hamilton led the advance. The troops rushed to the charge without firing a gun, and, in their headlong dash, went clear over abatis and palisade, plumping into the works with only nine men killed and thirty-two wounded, including seven officers. The British commander of the redoubt, Major Campbell, and some inferior officers, with seventeen privates were made prisoners. Eight privates of the gar-rison were killed in the assault. It was a hot little dash, done in fine style.

The French had a more serious job. The redoubt they stormed was garrisoned by 120 men, and it took a half hour's fight to carry it. The loss of the garrison was eighteen killed and forty-two made prisoners. The French lest, in killed and wounded, about 100. The severity of their loss was because they waited for the abatis to be removed before making their assault, and during all that time they were exposed to a galling fire. These redoubts were at once manned, and the next day opened a hot fire on the British. At 4 o'clock on the norning of the following day the British Colonel Abercrombie made a furious sor tie against the French batteries yet un-completed. He was successful at first, but Frenchmen soon dislodged him and drove him back. Then Cornwallis thought of flight. At 10 o'clock on the night of the 16th he got part of the army across the river to Gloucester, but the elements were against him and a furious storm that raged through the night stopped the movement, and next day those already across had to cross back to Yorktown. At daybreak on October 17, 100 years ago to-day, the second parallel was completed and what followed was what was expected. The French and American batteries rained such an iron hail upon the town that it was untenable, and Cornwallis sent a flag of truce for suspension of hostilities for twenty-four hours. Washington, fear-ful of the arrival of Sir Henry Clinton, with 7,000 British troops from New York, under a convoy of twenty-five ships of the line, gave Cornwallis just two hours, and with it proposed the terms of surrender. Five days after the surrender, the British reinforcement, described above, did arrive and learning the situation, at once made sail for New York again. On October 19 the articles of surrender were signed and the ceremony performed.

The loss of the British during the siege of Yorktown was 156 killed, 326 wounded, and seventy missing. The whole number surrendered by capitulation was a little over 7,000, making the total loss about 7,800. The besieging force consisted of 7,000 American regulars, 4,000 militia and 5,000 French—16,000 in all. Their loss in killed and wounded during the siege was about 300, The artillery and military stores and provisions surrendered were considerable. There were seventy-five brass and 160 iron cannons, 7,794 muskets, twenty-eight regimental standards (ten of them English and eighteen German), a large quantity of cannon-ball, bombs, musket cartridges, etc., etc. There was also nearly $11,000 in specie in the military chest. The important part the French took in this fight speaks for itself. But they did yet more. In July, when Cornwallis came up from the south and settled finally on Yorktown, Lafayette and Steuben hung in his rear nagging him all the way from Richmond. Once entrenched in Yorktown Cornwallis sent 3,000 Hessians to reinforce Clinton at New York who was menaced by Washington and Count Rochambeau. Lafayette informed Washington of this withdrawl of troops from Yorktown. Washington at once determined to abandon the New York attack and go to Virginia. He wrote letters detailing plans of his supposed attack on New York which he caused to fall in Clinton's hands and repulse him, Washington and Rocheam beau were hurrying south.

Rocheambeau advanced $20,000 in specie to prosecute the Yorktown campaign, Count De Barras commanding the French fleet in the waters of Rhode Island, was ordered to the Chesapeake and the French Admiral Count De Grasse also arrived there from the West Indies on the last day of August. The British fleet from New York under Sir Samuel Hord, hunting for De Grasse, arrived off Lynn it found On the morning of September 5th hesailed ont into deep water and after fighting on two days whipped the British badly, losing 220 men, while the British lost 336 and several ships. In the meantime Washing-ton and Rochambeau were passing south. Three days after the naval battle, Wash ington arrived at Annapolis and seized the opportunity to go to Mount Vernon. It was his first visit home since he had left it six years and five months before. The emainder of the month was occupied hurrying troops up and as detailed above the siege of Yorktown began with last day of September. How t a share the French bore great a share the French bore must make it plain that without their aid of blood and treasure by land and sea, Yorktown would never have been won. The generalship was Washington's. He bottled Cornwallis up as neatly as that thing was ever done. But it is because French help enabled him to do it that the descendants of those who, through these days a hundred years ago, fought in the last battle for independence on American soil, join with Americans in commemorat-

Stories of Judge Davis.

[New York Tribune.] The judge is the sort of a man of whom stories are sure to be told. The bar of Illinois and Indiana have endless aneedotes of him as lawyer and magistrate. During the campaign of 1860 his whole heart was engaged in the cause of Lincoln's candidacy, and his mind was apt to wander in that direction even while he was on the bench. It is said on one occasion, when a prosy attorney was darkening counsel with much language, that the judge went off into the realms of conjecture about the size of the vote that Douglas would get. The lawyer happened to say, "And now your honor, the matter rests in this state." The last word roused the judge from reverie. Still thinking of the Little Giant, he cried, "State! "Blood Will Tell."

To the Editor of The Indianapolis News: It is understood that under the policy of the fire department management, men of different trades are employed as far as possible, in order that necessary work may be done at no additional cost and the time of the firemen occupied. Among other machanics in the department are painters, but they do not seem to be employed. During the months of July and August the firm of Wiggins & Donnan stove dealers opposite the court house—Mr. Donnan is a brother-in-law of Chief Fire Engineer Pendergast-drew from the city treasury $434.31 for painting engine houses, repairing slate roofs and putting on gravel roof. It is a strange thing thing to me to hear of a stove and tin man painting and repairing slate roofs and making gravel ones. There have also been done by this firm forty-nine days work at $3 a day; for what purpose it is not stated, and the painting in the last two bills approved by the chief comes to $105.32. Mr. Pendergast allows his brother-in-law's firm $4 per square for putting on gravel roof. I am told by dealers that the regular price is $3 per square, though, in fact, more is put on at $2,50 and $2.75 than at a higher price. Any councilman or alderman who has had similar work done lately, can speak advisedly about this. Now, why did not the chief fire engineer, at least, have the painting done in the department as carpenter and harness work is done? Perhaps the city fathers had better look into it and see whether, if proper economy is maintained, it will be necessary to reduce the efficiency of the department by retiring engines or trucks. He had been re-proved the preceding evening for getting drunk. His remains were found Saturday afternoon and were buried yesterday.

To the Editor of The Indianapolis News: In your issue of October 14th we find the following statement:
The directors of the northern prison came to the city this morning to consult Attorney-general Polymer and Polyme

the city this morning to consult Attorney-general Baldwin upon an important legal matter that is pending. The directors have advertised to open up on the 19th bids for letting out prison labor. Chicago and South Bend parties who now have the convict contract, will, through their attorneys. Baker, Hord & Hendicks seek to prevent the board of directors from opening the bids and awarding the contract for the hiring of convicts to the highest bidder. The present contractors pay thirty cents a day for prison labor. This price was agreed on when labor was cheap and the directors are now able to get a much better offer, while the old contractors seek to eujoin them on the ground of some technicality in the advertisement for bids and hope thus to compel a re-advertisement and to reap the benefit of the old contract. In the mean time injunctions to prevent the opening junctions to prevent the opening of bids will be applied for Monday but the directors are using every means to defeat the suit. Under new and higher bids the directors hope to make the prison self sustaining to a great extent, and it is to be hoped their position is legally correct.

Believing that you always desire to publish only the truth concerning matters, and finding the above card so far from the truth, we have presumed to address to you this letter replying to its statements. We do not know the source of your informa-tion—and do not wish to impugn the motives of any one in making such state-ments—but its substance is so wholly at cannot restrain the natural impulse to reply and attempt, at least, to set ourselves right before the people of our state, whose good opinion is as desirable to us as to any tracts which were made with us as highest bidders at the time they were made, after due advertisement soliciting competition due advertisement soliciting competition in the bidding, and all their provisions and conditions have been faithfully observed by us. These contracts let the labor worked under their conditions at prices ranging from forty-five (45) cents per day to sixty-five (65) cents per day. verying somewhat with the kind of labor they perform, but principally from the value or desirability of such labor at the value or desirability of such labor at the time it was let, the latter contracts, and consequently those having the longest time to run-being at the highest price per dey. There is only one contract at thirty cents (30c) per day, a contract for forty (40) men, which covers cripples only, or such labor as is unfit to work upon any such labor as is unfit to work upon any other contract here. This contract is not held by the party originally making it, but was transferred by consent of the directors of the prison to one of our number, because the original party could not compete with labor outside the prison with the class of men that fell to him under its provisions. We will add here, that any one desiring such labor can come into possession siring such labor can come into possession of such contract by assuming its obliga-tions to the state, and giving bonds for their faithful observance, as the contrac-tors who now hold and work this contract do not consider it at all desirable.

We are not seeking to enjoin the directors of the prison because of any "technicaltry" in any action they have taken, but because this labor which they advertise and solicit bids for has been duly and legally let to us for the term of five years (5) rom the date of such letting, and much of it is covered by contracts having three or four years to run. If these contracts are to be set aside because they are illegal, how are we to reconcile such action with the fact that this board of directors has extended for five years from their expiration two contracts, now held and worked by one of our number, identical in their provisions, stipulations and conditions with the ones under ques-We do not desire to compel a "readver tisement" of these men. What we com-plain of is that they are advertised at all, after they have been legally let to us, as we confidently expect to show.

The highest price that can be gotten for this labor after due advertisement and fair competition in bidding is certainly for the best interest of the state, but we do not think the best interest of the state is served by bringing under question such contracts when honestly made and faithfully complied with, because it renders such con-tracts less desirable from the element of uncertainty and perplexity, which their possession entails. This depreciates the value of this kind of labor, and so it is that the interest of the state suffers in the hands, or at the hands, of a board of directors, whose duty it is to conserve such interests. We believe all fair minded business men will appreciate and approve this statement. Permit us to add in closing that all we desire in this matter is that the truth be known, and we hereby unite in inviting you to send a representative of your paper here, and every facility in our possession or at our command shall be placed at his disposal to investigate our statements, that they may be corroborated or denied as he may find the truth demands; and we most respectfully request that you give this reply—together with the statement that called it out—the same publicity that you gave the latter in the first instance, and very greatly oblige us. Very sincerely yours, J. H. WINTERBOTHAM & SONS,

DISTINCTION WITH DIFFERENCE Judge Heller Decides a Druggist May sell Cigars on Sunday, but a Regular Dealer

Judge Heller this morning decided the cases of Andrew Steffin, a cigar dealer, and Adrian Bowen, a druggist, charged with selling cigars on Sunday. The following is the judge's opinion in full:

Two cases have been submitted to the court for trial without the intervention of a jury. There were convictions in both cases before justices of the peace for violation of the Sunday law. They are here on appeal. Both informations charge the offense of common labor, and the pursuit of the usual avocation, by the defendants on the Sabbath, in the unlawful sale of cigars. Both defend] on the ground that the labor performed was excepted by the statute as being "work of necessity." The cases differ in the facts relied upon to establish their defenses. In the case of Adrian Bowen, tried by Justice Thompson, the defendant relies upon the fact that he is a druggist, and that the cigar case from which the sale was made is an incident to the drug business, which he claims can be as legitimately used on Sunday as the prescription case, the use of which is not questioned. In the trial of Andrew Steffens, tried by Justice Pease, the defendant relied upon the fact that his business is that of manufacturing and selling cigars. That he sold the cigar in question to an habitual smoker, to whom it was a necessity. Two cases have been submitted to the cour

These defenses are to a large extent based on a recent case decided by Biddle J., reported in 69 Ind. 61, and known as the Carver case. The interpretation of this statute by the supreme court is binding upon all inferior triounals and the definition of the word necessity, as used in this act and defined by the court must be accepted, until the supreme court overrules or questions the accuracy. The lower courts are responsible for an incorrect interpretation of the decision. It is then with the law as we find it in the statutes, and in the decision of the supreme court, only then with the law as we find it in the statutes, and in the decision of the supreme court, only that we have to deal.

The sale by Bowen is charged to have been made on the 25th of September, 1881, and that by Steffens on the 3d of October, 1881. Both fall under the 95th section of "an act concerning public offenses and their punishment," approved April 14, 1881. It is as follows: Whoever being over fourteen years of age, is found on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, rioting, hunting, fishing, quarreling, at common labor, or engaged in his usual avocation, works of charity and necessity only excepted, shall be fined in any sum not more than ten nor less than one dollar, but nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect such as conscientiously observe the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath, travelers, families removing, toll bridges and toll gates, and ferrymen acting as such.

Courts know indicially that selling merchan.

courts know judicially that selling merchandise whether it be cigars or beer is common labor. It is secular business and was intended to be reached by the statute. Wetzler vs. The State 18 Ind., 416; Eitel vs. The State 33 Ind., 201; Foitz vs. The State 33 Ind., 215. These cases directly hold that a cigar dealer may not sell cigars on Sunday. I found nothing in subsequent decisions overruling these cases and incigars on Sunday. I found nothing in subsequent decisions overruling these cases and indeed nothing in conflict with them, unless it be in the case of Carver vs. The state 69 Ind., 61. If the court had been considering a case similar to the one made here against Steffens the language used by the court in the Carver case would be broad enough to shelter him from prosecution. The same judge in the case of Edgerton vs. The State, 67 Ind., 588, says that whether a work is a work of necessity or not, must necessarily depend upon the facts in each case. Sometimes a similar state of facts would be a work of necessity, and sometimes not; the question therefore can not be reduced to a proposition of law which is uniform and applicable to all cases alike. If it had been the purpose of the court to overrule or question the three cases which decide that selling cigars, by one in that vocation, on Sunday is unlawful, the court would at least have referred to them. It is true that it is said in that decision that the word necessity, when used in a law touching the voluntary conduct of men, has a hat the word neressity, when used in a law ouching the voluntary conduct of men, has a echnical meaning differing from that when used in other relations. It is also said that habused in other relations. It is also said that habit and desire create necessities, and that there is a daily necessity for smoking a cigar by those who who have acquired the habit, or continuing any other lawful habit, on Sunday, the same as there is upon a-week day, and whatsoever is necessary and proper to do on Sunday to supply this constant daily need, is a-work of necessity within the fair meaning of the law under consideration. And, on the contrary, it also said that there is a difference between a work which may be done on one day as well as another, and which is not a daily need and a work necessary to supply a daily want. "There is no necessity for one of selling from a store of the order of the sunday."

The question that is decided in the Carver case is simply this: that a hotel which keeps a cigar stand as a part of its establishment, from which it sells cigars to its guests, boarders and custoit sells cigars to its guests, boarders and custo-mers on a week day, may lawfully sell from the same stand in the same way on Sunday.

To say that under this decision a cigar store may be kept open lawfully on Sunday, when the supreme court, in three cases that have not been overruled, or directly criticised even, de-cides in positive terms that it cannot be, is ex-tending the case of Carver w. The State beyond ending the case of Carver vs. The State beyond its limits, and unquestionably cides in positive terms that it cannot be, is extendine the case of Carver vs. The State beyond its limits, and unquestionably beyond its expressed intendment.

In the case against Bowen another state of facts exists. The defeudant is a druggist. Circumstances are of daily occurrence which render it absolutely necessary that drug stores be kept continually open for the accommodation of the public, Sundays not excepted. It is as necessary that they be accessible on Sunday as that a hotel be so on that day. A cigar stand in a drug store, as part of its establishment, from which it sells cigars to its customers, is as common and as closely allied, as an incident of its business, as such a stand is to a hotel. If this be true, then the Carver case lays down the principle which decides the Bowen case; for it is not unlawful to keep a drug store open on Sunday. According to the Carver and the Edgerton cases the right to carry on the drug business on Sunday carries with it the right to operate it with all its incidents on that day as it is on other days of the week. This principle is recognized also by Thurman, J. (McGatrick v. Mason, 4 Obio St., 572), who says it is no part of the design of the act to destroy, orimpose onerous restrictions upon any lawful trade or business. The work excepted can not be limited to actual uncon rollable necessity, but the necessity may grow out of, or be an incident to a particular business and yet be a necessity within the meaning of the act. It may be a necessity created by the exingencies of society ortrade. If nothing but absolute necessity was intended, it would, in general, be unlawful to repeate a meal on Sunday, because it might, without difficulty, be previously prepared, or because most persons might safely enough fast for twenty-four hours. It would be equally unlawful to supply us with gas, for we might use andes previously laid in or retire to our beds at twilight. And so, many things admitted to be lawful, would be brought within the prohibition of the statute.

It has been held in Indiana that the following acts of common labor performed on Sunday are specified by the statute as "works of necessity:" Hauling corn to feed hogs; cutting "dead ripe" wheat; gathering and hauling to market ripe waternclons; gathering and boiling sugar water; hotel keepers selling cigars, when that business is carried on as an incident to the hotel business; working in a brewery at the grain while it is in process of malting, Edgerton vs. The State, 67 Ind., 595; Williamson vs. The State, 63 Ind., 416; Carver vs. The State, 69 Ind., 61; Crockett vs. The State, 53 Ind., 416; Morris vs. The State, 11nd., 139; Jones vs. Johnson, 61 In., 257.

In the case of Edgerton vs. The State, the defendant was indicted for gathering and hauling fendant was indicted for gathering and hauling corn on the 20th of October, 1878. He pleaded in defense that it was work of necessity; that he gathered and hauled the corn to feed his hogs. The court, in deciding the cases, says; "We can not see anything in the evidence out of the ordinary that the cordinary that the court is the cordinary that the cord hogs The court, in deciding the cases, says:

to feed them on a week day." As I view these cases the sale of the cigar by Bowen was not unto feed them on a week day." As I view these cases the sale of the eigar by Bowen was not unlawful.

Although the present statute is practically a re-enactment of the old law, it is a new statute, having been changed by the revision committee along with the other laws of the state. It has never been considered by the supreme court in exactly its present shape. If it gives rights and immunities to one citizen that it withholds from another it should be remodeled. A citizen who conscentiously observes the seventh day of the week as sunday is given the right to engage in common labor, or in the pressure of his usual vocation seven days during the week, while those who do not conscientiously observe the seventh day as the Sabbath, are only permitted to be thus employed six days. If too, a Jew and a Gentile are engaged at their vocation on Saturday and Sunday under exactly the same circumstances, this statute says one is a public offender and the other is not. One is subjected to a penalty for his act and the other has immunity therefrom. The result is that because a man conscientiously observes the first day of the week as Sunday in the same manner that the law permits those who observe the seventh day, to observe it becomes a public offender. I am aware that the supreme court have declined to discuss the constitutionality on the Sunday law, but declare it to be constitutional. In these cases. (Foltz vs. The State, 33 Ind., 215; Voglesong vs. The State, 9 ind., 112, and Reynolds vs. The State, 4 Ind., 619;) the question here presented was evidently not considered. It is not cases. (Foltz vs. The State; 33 Ind., 215; Vogleseng vs. The State, 9 Ind., 112, and Reynolds vs. The State, 4 Ind., 619;) the question here presented was evidently not considered. It is not the question whether the legislature can enforce the observance of the Sabbath as a civil regulation upon grounds of public policy, which is declared by the court to be settled in the affirmative, but whether the legislature can make an act no public when offense committed by a person entertaining a certain conscientious belief, and the same act a public offense, solely because committed by a person entertaining a ifferent belief. It is universally held to be no art of the object of the Sunday laws to enforce he observance of a religious duty, but simply o prescribe a day of rest, frem motives of pub-to diescribe a day of rest, frem motives of public policy, and as a civil regulation. In the case of Society vs. The Commonwealth, reported in 6 Am. Law Reg., p. 34, it is held that lews are bound to observe civil regulation for keep. 19 the Sabbath. With this avowed object of the law how can this exception in the statute be justified?

Does the constitution of Indiana permit this discrimination in the enforcement of her civil regulations? regulations?

The finding of the court will be that the defendant, Andrew Steffens, is guilty at charged, and that the defendant, Adrian Bowen, is not

CONTRACT—INSTRUCTIONS—INJUNCTION.

S087. John Baker vs. John Pottmeyer et al.

Cass S. C. Reversed. Woods, J.

This was a complaint by the appelleant praying an injunction against the appellees. The complaint is based on a certain agreement in which one John Pottmeyer sold to Campbell and Baker all the ice in a certain ice house, his norses, wagons and equipments for delivering ice. and the said Pottmeyer agreed never to engage in the ice business in the city of Logansport, and never to encourage others to engage in such business, he also agreed to give Campbell and Baker the preference for leasing the ice houses in the future, and that he would not sell the houses to any one for the purpose of engaging in the ice ture, and that he would not seil the houses to any one for the purpose of engaging in the ice business. Campbell, some time after, transferred his interest in the agreement to Baker, and it was charged in the complaint that Campbell and Pottmeyer had gone into the ice business in Logansport, to the damage of the plaintiff. Trial and finding for the defendants. The merits of the case are involved in the instructions given and refused. The instructions which the court gave of its own motion are based upon a misconception of the legal effect of the contract into which the parties had entered. Pottmeyer had bound himself to "Campbell and Baker or either of them" that he would not do the things named, he bound himself jointly and to each severally. He that he would not do the things named, he bound himself jointly and to each severally. He could no as against Campbell and Baker aid any other person, nor either one of them in a separate business hostile to that of the firm; and as against either Campbell or Baker yet engaged in business he could not help the other. Therefore Pettneyer had no right in any manner to aid Campbell in instituting and prosecuting the hostile business; and Campbell knowing this, as he necessarily did, that Pottmeyer had no right to give, he had no right to receive that aid, from the nature of the ease, just and adequate damages can not be estimated for the breach of such covenant, and consequently injunction is the proper method.

CONSTRUCTION OF A DEED—ESTATE IN FEE.

7750. Jesse P. Edwards et al. vs. Albert Beall. Knox C.C Affirmed. Franklin, Com.

This action was brought by appellee against appellants to set aside a deed, quiet title and for partition.

appellants to set aside a deed, quiet title and for partition.

[1.] The deed, on which appellee's claim was founded, contained the language: "convey and warrant to Mrs. Celestine Beall and Mr. John Beall, etc., to be held by Mrs. Celestine Beall as her own property, Mr. John Beall having the possession of the same during his lifetime. Said possession to return to Mrs. Beall if she survives her husband." The evident intent of the parties to this deed, was, that an interest in the property should be conveyed to both of them, that John should have possession during his life, but the fee simple should be in his wife, subject to his life estate. On the death of said Celestine two-thirds of the property would descend immediately to her heirs. On the death of the said John, the property would not be subject to sale by his administrator, only the portion inherited from his wife (71 Ind., 412; 29 Ind., 478; 60 Ind., 334.)

[2] Where the record shows that a party appeared in court, filed a demurrer to the complaint, in which he thought he was a party and the court thought he was a party, he must be regarded as having been a party. If he went to trial without answer, the complaint wiil be deemed to be controverted as if answer in denial had been filed. (50 Ind., 526; 54 Ind., I61.)
[3] It is urged by appellants coursel that the appellee had no right to bring this suit before he was of age. But no objection was taken either by demurrer or answer, to his capacity to sue, the objection shall be deemed as waived (Busk Prac. 170—171.)

REFORMATION OF MORTGAGE—PRACTICE, 8072. Pryor J. Conyers vs. Anthony W. Merickles et al. Decatur C. C. Best, Com. [1.] It is well settled that the recovery of a dgment by a mortgage is no bar to an action foreclose the mortgage (16 Ind., 404; 17 Ind.,

[2.] It is the rule that where a demurrer is sustained to a good paragraph of answer, and there is another paragraph under which proof may be made, no harm is done, but this is not the rule when a demurrer is overruled to a bad paragraph. (Over vs. Shannon, this term.)

[3.] Where a mortgage was foreclosed, and in the mortgage the description of the land was erroneous, and such erroneous description was carried out in the decree, advertisement of sale and sheriff's deed, the holder of the mortgage may ignore the previous foreclosure proceeding may ignore the previous foreclosure proceeding altogether, and bring a new action to have his morigage reformed and foreclosed as reformed. The foreclosure on the erroneous description was a mere nullity. The mortgage as reformed is a different instrument, embraces a different parcel of land and one against which no foreclosure has been had. The first judgment of foreclosure does not form any obstacle to the reformed in and foreclosure of the reformed. reformation and foreclosure of the reformed mortgage. Steuben and Lafayette.

A statement, reprinted from a com-munication to the New York Sun, appeared munication to the New York Sun, appeared in The News of last week to the effect that the grave of Gen. Steuben, in Oneida county, New York, was marked by a small monument, which would probably soon give way to a better one. W. H. H. Miller, of the large firm of Harrison, Hines & Miller, who was born in Oneida county, has called the attention of a News reporter to the fact that the statement conveys a wrong idea as News reporter to the fact that the statement conveys a wrong idea as to the care that has been taken of the old hero's grave. In consideration of General Steuben's services in the revolution, the legislature of New York gave him 1,600 acres, a quarter of a township, in Oneida county, New York, which was purchased from the Oneida Indianas. The land is located north of the city of Utica. It was the desire of General Steu-Utica. It was the desire of General Steu-ben that he should be buried in the depths of the forest on this tract, the locality of the grave to be kept a secret. This desire was complied with at first, but it was subsequently found impossible to keep the place a secret. In 1824 a simple monument was placed above the the grave. Afterwards Col. Walker, Gen. Steuben's ac pted son, reinterred the remains, deeding fifty acres of the land to the First Baptist society of Steuben en condition that five acres should be set apart in a state of nature. It is in this spot that the remains now lie. In 1870-2 a monument designed by Henry Peck, of New York and executed at a cost of $3,500 was erected. The base and body of the monument is of western limestone and the surmounting shaft of granite. The base is fourteen feet square and the total height is fifteen feet. Within a wreath cut in relief in the granite upon one of the faces is the word "Steuben." Four Parrott grans are planted on reverse at the engles. guns are planted en reverse at the angles of the monument. The whole is plain, simple and substantial. The corner stone was laid June 1, 1870. Governor Seymour delivered the principal address in the presence of 6,000 people. The cost of the monument was jointly defrayed by the state legislature and the people of Oneida county.

G. W. Ryan, Sr., 97 Dougherty street, of this city, writes to The News that Mr. Rizin Ferguson was mistaken in saying that Lafayette was gray-haired when he vis-ited the United States in 1824. Mr. Ryan saw Lafayette in Cincinnati in that year, when the general came there with his son. The general's hair was sandy as Mrs. Blake remembers, but his son's hair was gray. remembers, but his son's hair was gray.
Mr. Ryan was at the landing as Lafayette and his son passed in a hack. Some gentlemen remarked that the son looked older than the father. All the Sabbath school children of the city formed on Broadway in line. The general passed along, taking the teachers by the hand and addressing a word or two to the children, among whom Mr. Ryan stood. Mr. Ryan thinks Mr. Ferguson mistook Lafayette's son for the general.

John Carlisle, the veteran miller, can be added to those in this city who remember having seen Lafayette. Mr. Carlisle lived in Newburgh, N. Y., when the general visited that place in 1824.

Delay in Street Railroad Building. A morning paper says "a mile of the new street railway track is laid, and a contract in progress for a direct line beyond the river to the stock yards." The "contract" may be a correct item in this information, but the "mile of track" isn't. There is a half square of completed track on South street, and two squares plowed up and scooped out, and has been left in this fix for two weeks nearly, to the for two weeks nearly, to the serious obstruction of all business, for no reason but the company's leisure or pleasure. On West street a third of a mile is plowed and channeled, and on most of it the track is laid. A little more than a at the track is laid. A little more than a quarter of a mile of track was done on both streets, this morning. South street is one of the busiest in the city out of the business region, and it is lying with one-half of the available roadway ruined for the time, without the slightest apparent attempt at an advance of the work and restoration of the street.

A Chance for the Society of P. C. A.
An old, half-starved, helpless horse, belonging, it is said, to a West street express driver, was recently turned out to die, and the street arabs of the rolling mill region, after riding it till it could barely move on Saturday, left it Saturday night lying in the gutter on South street, where it lay dying all day yesterday and last night, to be deviled by some and gazed at by others of a continuous crowd of idlers, till 10 o'clock last night. The owner was notified to relast night. The owner was notified to remove it but paid no attention to the notice, so the reporter was told. It was a case of cruelty that richly deserves the penalty of the late law. This morning the horse died.

A New Railroad Connection.

Track has been laid on the Newcastle & Rushville railroad from Newcastle southward, twenty-four miles to Rushville where ward, twenty-four miles to Rushville where it connects with the line just completed—the North Vernon. The new road is a branch of the Fort Wayne, Muncie & Cincinnati with which it connects at Newcastle. Louisville has now a direct line to Fort Wayne by way of the Vernon, Greensburg & Rushville and the Ohio & Missisippi on the line projected by the Indiana Southern company many years ago.

TO-NIGHT.

Though the reserve at the Grand Opera house for the only perfomance of Joe Jefferson is unusually large, there are still eligible seats. Mr. Jefferson plays "Bob Acres" in a manner to refute the prevalent in the base of the prevalent with the base identified himself with idea that he has so identified himself with his great character of "Rip Van Winkle," that he has almost lost his individuality in it. He is supported by a select company, including Mrs. John Drew, Mr. Frederick Robinson, Mr. Thomas Jesseron and others.

At English's, Eaton's bright farcical play At English's, Eaton's bright farcical play of "All the Rage" will be given by an excellent company, including Laura Dainty, so well and favorably known here as a public reader. The piece is full of humor and draws large houses everywhere. It will run three nights and matinee.

The Lyra concert at Mozart hall to-night has arranged on attractive program. The gie Mitchell will occupy English's and will play "Jane Eyre," "The Pearl of Savoy," play "Jane Eyre," "The Pearl of Savoy," in both of which she has hosts of admirers, and a new play, "The Little Savage," written expressly for her. At Dickson's Grand Opera house the muical extravaganza "Our Goblins, or Fun on the Rhine," will be played. It is full of good music and pure fun.

New Corporations.

Articles of association of the New York and Council Bluffs railway company were filed with the secretary of state to-day. The main road crosses the state at or near the forty-first parallel, and a branch beginning in the southeast corner of Adams county, passes through Adams, Wells, Huntington, Wabash and Miami councies, giving a total length in this state of 230 miles. The cap-Ital stock is $5,000,000.

Articles of incorporation of the Royal marriage association, of Union City, have been filed. Object, to encourage matrimony, and to give charitable aid to young men and women at the commencement of

A certificate of incorporation of the Eastern Indiana marriage association, of Richmond, was filed this morning. The object of the organization is to issue a simple contract payable to members who may marry, or whose certificate may expire.

The West Market.

The strict enforcement of the market law will work some hardship to the grocers and small traders who have located on the west market space. Their places were closed at noon to-day, and hereafter they will only be permitted to open on Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning and Saturday evening—being placed under the same restrictions as the itinerant market men who rent curb stone space from the city. The latter class pay thirty cents per week for their privileges, while the dealer referred to above pay seventy five cents, erect their own houses and are given no more privilege than those who do not pay half as much. Nobody is benefitted by having these dealers closed up, and while the law was intended to protect the poor by reserv-ing a market for them, it works a hardship by preventing the cheap retailer from buying and selling during each week day.

General Christian Convention. The arrangements for the reception of delegates to the Christian convention, which begins to night and continues through the week, have been completed, and every thing is in readiness. Six hundred delegate guests have so far signified their intention of being present, and provision for their entertainment has been made, while accommodations for one hundred addi-tional guests who may come in unan-nounced are held in reserve by the committee on arrangements to-night. Rev. George Walk will preach the initiatory sermon at Central church. To-morrow morning a social meeting will be held by the ladies in the lecture room, to be fol-lowed to-morrow night by an address from Rev. Isaac Errett of Cincinnati. The meet ing to-morrow night will be under the auspices of the woman's board of foreign missions.

Full of Business. George W. Boyd, of the Pennsylvania Central, in the city on a short visit, has views as to railroad matters. That great road has about all it can handle, and is constantly adding to its equipment, especially in the freight line. The cost of handany in the treight line. The cost of hand-ling passengers and freight has been reduc-ed almost to a minimum by the straight-ning of tracks, cutting down grades, in-creasing of switching facilities, etc. The passenger sees hardly anything between New York and Pittsburg but freight and passenger trains either moving or stationary, and the employes are kept on the jump to attend to their duties. Mr. Boyd thinks there is always something new to learn in the railroad business, and if a railroad man wants to keep ahead of the times he must not invest too much time in sleep but keep wide awake and stir himself lively to keep up with the sharp competition. Indianapolis Grain Market.

(FIRE)

Insurance Company

THE FRANKLIN (FIRE) INSURANCE COMPANY, of Indianapolis, is receiving, as it deserves to receive, the liberal patronage of the people of the state. Its businesss is rapidly increasing, and should continue to increase. It helps to pay our taxes and build up our City and State. It has already loaned a large sum of money at a low interest to the people of Indiana, and if it continues to receive the patronage it deserves, in a few years it will have half a million dollars invested in our midst. Its officers and directors are well-known business men. JAMES E. ROB-ERTSON is President; F. A. W. DAVIS, Vice-president. and W. W. Woollen, Secretary. Its policies give as sure indemnity as those of any other company writing insurance in the state.
